According to the author, King Amanullah of Afghanistan ordered four of his ministers to do a complete survey of the country, in 1922. Minister of War Muhammad Nadir Khan, who subsequently became king in 1929, was sent to Qataghan and Badakhshan, which today consists of four provinces: Baghlan, Qunduz, Takhar, and Badakhshan, i.e. all the areas north of the Hindukush. Kushkaki's volume is the only one of the four surveys published. A French translation together with a critical edition of the Persian text was published by the CNRS in three volumes in 1979.
